Registration Cards Win Freedom for Most of Those Taken in Coney Raid.

Of the 158 alleged slackers combed out of the crowd of 653 rounded up morning in Coney shal Power and a large squad of police and military auxiliaries, eightytwo remained in custody in Raymond Street Jail at noon to-day. All of the others had been released when anxious friends and relatives presented their registration and classification cards.

When the Marshal's office opened to-day ninety-one of the suspected slackers still were in the Raymond Street Jail. In the first hour of business the credentials of nine won freedom for them when presented by wives or sweethearts. The remaining eighty-two are due to appear before a United States Commissioner this afternoon, there to be arraigned for failure to show classification and registration cards. Under the Draft Law this is punishable, upon conviction. by imprisonment of eleven months and twenty-nine days.

Assistant District Attorney Harwood said to-day the cases of all who are arraigned before the Commissioner will be referred to the Headquarters Draft Board in Brooklyn and by that body to the several draft boards throughout the city with which the accused should have registered. Until reports are received from these boards the men will be held in heavy bail.

If a man is found not to have been registered through an omission not capable of being characterized as wilful, he will be released and given opportunity to register at once. Wilful failure, when demonstrated by the local board, will be sufficient to hold the prisoner for trial in the United States District Court.

Those who are found to have registered but have not filed their questionnaires come under the classifica tion of deserters; they will be sent as prisoners to Fort Jay. The raid, which fell about an hour after midnight, was the largest that had been made anywhere in the coun-try. One hundred and fifty patrolmen, twenty soldiers, ten sailors and thirty five Deputy Marshals participated in the general round-up of suspected slackers and unregistered alien

SUMMING UP BEGUN IN THE O'NEIL TRIAL

Draft Conspiracy Case Probably Will Go to the Jury Late This Afternoon.

Without preventing any witnesses of case, attorneys for Frank S. O'Neil Lieut, Oswald L. Simpson and William spiracy to violate the Espionage Act by accepting money from prospective rafted men to obtain freedom from service, began summing up before Judge Martin T. Manton in the Federal District Court to-day.

None of the defendants went on the stand, Martin Littleton, attorney for O'Nell, read the indictment to the jury and then attacked it on the ground his client had done nothing to cause dis-loyalty or discourage enliatment or re-

A motion of the defense to strike out A motion of the defense to strike out all testimeny bearing on negotiations for transfers from combatant to non-combatant branches of the service was overruled by Judse Manton, who held that the negotiations were not conducted in good faith.

Summing up perhaps will require aff day and the case will probably go to the jury late this afternoon.

were no longer required.

The men then went to machinistal headquarters and reported to Business Agent H. W. Brown. He told them to fill out cards, giving their employer and separtment they worked in and all the circumstances relating to their cases. In view of the position taken by the employers and the apparent anxiety because of the delay in war material he was surprised at the attitude taken.

The matter will be placed before Major Getchell, who is on his way from

"Jimmy" Woods is a popular idol.
When he resigned as Police Commissioner and said "goodby" to the St.
Francis, they wept tears and wine.
They gave a big banquet to him and there was a procession down to the Oakland Ferry to see him off. All backs. He remembers the old gray the cops were dressed in their best coated Hack Inspector, who stood at

Mr. Woods left the Waldorf-Astoria thirteen years ago to take charge of the St. Francis, the palatial caravansary of San Francisco. He just had to go out West, because they are the companies of the st. Francisco. the cops were dressed in their best uniforms, and they all rubbernecked to give him their best salute.

It was the second time in six years that he had resigned from the head of the department, and they thought he might come back again. But no: "Jimmy" has returned to his old home and his old love for keeps. "Jack" Bowman, who is Mr. Hoover's chief assistant, says that he is quarantined here for good.

Well, they'll miss "Jimmy" on Market Street, and the roses in Union Square opposite the St. Francis will surely will, for Jimmy Woods was the sunshine of Powell Street, His smile made the cable cars run up hill.

"And the city will continue to grow."

When they had the fire out in San Francisco in 1906 most of the hotels were pushed off the map by fire, dynamite and other snocks. The St. Francis stood up like a staunch yacht in a stiff gale at sea, out the interior was wrecked in a manner that wasn't nice. Mr. Woods gained permission from the Park Commissioners to put up a hotel in the park opposite. In forty-five days after the fire the St. Francis Annex had 150 rooms ready for occupancy. It was an oasis in a desert of ashes.

Visitors to the Coast at that time will recall that delightful hostelry in Union Square, with its flower-secnted shaded pathways leading to the main entrance. It was the real life of the devastated city for many moons. Mr. Woods was meantime rebuilding the interior of the big St. Francis; then he helped to rebuild "the city that was." Then they made \( \) im a Police Commissioner and he helped to keep good the city that was built. Gus White was made Chief of Police and still holds the job.

"A fine man is the chief," said Mr. Woods. "A reformer? No, not ex-
